

Camden Hotel Dining

Camden Hotel hides a beautiful secret.... One of the best restaurants in the district.

It is clear upon entry that Camden Hotel is no ordinary pub. It presents like a five star city hotel. The similarities go much deeper than mere aesthetics though.

The other main feature it shares with its flash city cousins is a seriously good restaurant with fine, modern cuisine.

Chef Philip Mumford has a background cooking in those very same city hotels. He produces creative, fine dining dishes which look a million dollars and taste just as good.

I have eaten quite a few times at Camden Hotel. The food is consistently very good, the ambience is surprisingly sophisticated and the service is as good as most of our district's restaurants.

I know many of you still have reservations about dining of this standard in a hotel. Camden Hotel is a night spot too but believe me, the kids don't step foot inside a venue before nine or ten o'clock. That leaves plenty of time for a leisurely dining experience.

If there are clear similarities between Camden Hotel and ritzy city hotels, they end at the cash register. Camden Hotel prices are extremely good for the quality on offer.

- Left Scotch fillet with prawns, Parisian potato, broccolini and cream sauce.
- Right Olive brushed barramundi fillet with Greek style potatoes and parsley salad
- Back Camden Mixed Grill
