

where we've been...

The Chocolate Room by Kirsty

I caught up with a friend of mine recently and we decided to go to The Chocolate Room at Oran Park. The name says it all really and I was looking forward to... Everything chocolate.

It was morning tea but I purposely held off on my usual breakfast so I had room for a little indulgence. Once there I noticed they also had a great breakfast menu including Dutch pancakes (those cute little ones), a Canadian breakfast which is bacon and pancakes basically but once I had the word chocolate in my brain it was a little hard to change it. I've decided I might have to come back another time to try either the breakfast or even lunch, they had some cool burgers and 'Nutella and Caramel Crunchie Bombs' (you might have seen photos of these doing the rounds - milk shakes with a donut and cream on top!). Yep! I'll be back!

Jo arrives and we get chatting... and chatting. I stopped myself mid sentence to order. Chatter can wait. We both were narrowing it down between the Belgian Chocolate Waffles and the Sweet Nutella Crepes. "Order both and we can try each others!" The waffles came with ice cream, strawberries and banana and lashings of chocolate all over the plate. I swear the fruit tastes even better when dipped in good chocolate. Yum! They were both generous servings. Jo didn't get through all of her crepes so I helped (this was for work!). Everything was wonderful.

The Chocolate Room should be on your indulgence list. I'm glad I don't live closer. Danger!
