

Common Ground Bakery Razorback Inn

Common Ground Bakery is an amazing new addition to our hospitality industry. Wonderfully situated in the historic Razorback Inn, Common Ground Bakery is the destination lunch spot Macarthur has been waiting for. And according to the owners, what we see now is only the first stage of their grand plans for Razorback Inn.

This family run business is as much about sustainability and simple eating as it is a business. I have said many times on these pages that agriculture should be localised as much as possible. Eat what's grown locally through each season. It just makes sense.

Common Ground grows, uses and sells their own produce. Much of what you eat inside the cosy country style cafe is grown on a nearby farm. It feels good, it tastes good.

We dropped in for one of Common Ground's already famous Pizza Nights. We being my three kids and I. No arguments at dinner tonight. Pizza is just about universal in its appeal. Good pizza IS universal in its appeal. Common Ground's pizzas are very good. Only about four or five selections, plus a nightly special, they are all tasty, light and almost grease free.

Everyone loves homemade pizzas. The flavours and textures of Common Ground's pizzas are similar to that of the home made variety. We all loved them. Our favourite was the Special - Pesto Chicken with Fresh Salsa, Olives, Fetta and Sun Dried Tomatoes. Get to Common Ground Bakery's Pizza Nights. The food is great, the surroundings, at the very least, present a very 'different' atmosphere. The staff are lovely people too. Not a bad word to say. Common Ground rocks!
